Anthony Minesalle II

Anthony Minessale II is the lead developer and creator of FreeSWITCH™, an open source telephony project. He is continuously developing improvements for his project. He has been programming for 15 years and has been the man behind Asterlink.

Anthony Minessale oversees the development of multiple projects on customer relationship management (CRM) system, Intranet platform, and all network and application architecture. Mr. Minessale brings over fifteen years of programming, project management, and systems administration experience to enterprises.

Minessale served as the senior technology officer of web hosting and ISP companies where he helped expand the companies' infrastructure from one computer into a complex web hosting network of over five hundred UNIX and NT systems, complete with provisioning, support, billing, and monitoring capabilities.

Minessale attended the University of Wisconsin Milwaukee where he studied computer science.

In addition the following people have contributed, and then there are the countless masses that have contributed that are not mentioned.

- Michael Jerris (mike@jerris.com) - Windows porter and responsible for the windows\msvc build system as well as the UNIX build system.
- Brian K. West - For countless hours of work on BSD and Mac support, finding countless bugs, and moral support. Xcode project files.
- Joshua Colp - For his help making mod_exosip possible (which we are now getting rid of but oh well), and for just being a swell guy!
- Michal "cypromis" Bielicki (michal.bielicki AT halo2.pl) - Solaris porting, and autotools enhancements.
- James Martelletti (james@nerdc0re.com) - All around cool guy (mod_syslog)
- Johny Kadarisman (jkr888@gmail.com)
- Yossi Neiman of Cartis Solutions, Inc. (freeswitch AT cartissolutions.com) - implementation of mod_cdr (Perl, MySQL, CSV)
- Stefan Knoblich - Various patches and support. Thanks.
- Justin Unger - (justinunger at gmail dot com) Lots of help with patches and SIP testing. Thanks!
